This Week in Washington

Washington.—The atmosphere of Washington at this writing, may best be described as a mixture of politics and war. To be sure, the atmosphere of Washington is always political, but the present combination of circumstances gives a political tinge to everything that is said and done, in and out of Congress. And there is very much concern about war, and the possibility of the United States being drawn into the situation in the Far East by officials who know about the real situation.

Politically, Washington is concerned immediately with the 1938 Congressional elections, as well as more remotely with the Presidential election of 1940. Many of the recent public utterances of men in high places have no other real purpose than to make it easier to re-elect present Administration supporters and fill some of the seats in both houses with sympathetic legislators.

Big Bad Business Blamed for Slump
The Administration and its supporters are sensitive to public reactions; the present business and industrial depression has tended to shake the confidence of some voters in the Administration's policies. At first the idea was to deny that there was a depression. The tactics finally adopted were to admit and deny it. It is an axiom of both war and politics that the best defense is in vigorous attack. So the admission was made that there was a depression, but that it had been brought on by unscrupulous business and financial policies which needed correction and adjustment. That would shift the newspaper headlines from the depression itself to the causes behind the slump.

Mr. Jackson's Political Prospects
A part of the political play in Washington is the evident effort of Mr. Roosevelt to promote Mr. Jackson into the Governorship of New York, at the 1938 election next November. Former General Feltley has been induced to drop his suspected ambition for that high office, to clear the way for Mr. Jackson.

Many folk here believe that the President is quietly grooming Mr. Jackson for the Presidency in 1940. Possibly Mr. Jackson shares that belief. The "out" about that theory is that the next Governor of New York will be elected for a four-year term, instead of two years, so that if he were to run for President in 1940 he would have to resign in the middle of his term, which would confuse the Presidential campaign.

Some showed Washington onlookers in this apparent advocacy of Jackson as his successor a move by the President to keep Secretary Henry Wallace from getting too far out in front. Everybody here believes that the Secretary of Agriculture is definitely a candidate. But the President, these gossipers say, does not want to be manoeuvred into the position of backing Mr. Wallace. Hence his tacit approval of Jackson as Presidential timber.

War Preparations Go On
The defeat in Congress of the Ludlow resolution for a popular referendum before this country ever goes to war was largely influenced by the President's opposition to it. And the President, in turn, was undoubtedly influenced by facts and conditions not generally known or fully understood in circles where they are known. Outwardly the Secretary of State must maintain a calm and peaceful attitude and tone. Inside, however, is a man who is talking in a way to indicate that the time is coming to grips with Japan and other aggressor nations.

Some say that Congressional pressure on the President and the State Department prevented a more aggressive reply to Japan's apology for the sinking of the U.S. gunboat "Panay." The President was told emphatically by his party leaders that Congress would not back him up in a reply to Japan as aggressive as that first drafted. Diplomats who know are saying that the attitude of Congress is taken in Japan as proof that the United States is bluffing and will do nothing no matter how many warships are sunk by Japanese bombs.

Meantime secret Army and Navy movements are under way in the Pacific, the Army and Navy budget has been increased, and there are many more indications that the Administration is not so dangerous. Richberg Plans Business Regulation
(There is little doubt here that there will be a spectacular anti-trust campaign by the Department of Justice, nor any Congressional investigation of trust.) Probably such an investigation will be authorized next year.

More seriously regarded is the plan which the Administration is reported to be considering for a new method of government regulation of business. It is believed to be the creation of Donald Richberg, former head of NRA. The new plan would establish a government agency with power or clothe the Federal Trade Commission with power to call persons engaged in any

FAIRS

In less than a year and a half from now two great fairs will throw open their gates for people to come in and the wonders of the world all assembled in one place. One fair will be on the Atlantic coast, in New York; the other on the Pacific, at San Francisco. The New York World's Fair expects to have a hundred million visitors; San Francisco hopes for half as many. One thing is certain: 1939 will be the greatest year for travel the country has ever known.

The New York World's Fair will be the greatest international exhibition ever held. All the nations of the world will have their own buildings on the Fair grounds where they will show the products of their countries in the most attractive setting they can devise. Many nations have agreed to spend more than a million dollars on their exhibits. Every State in the Union will have its own pavilion to show the rest of the country what it makes or grows, and the Federal Government will depict its national activities in a $2,500,000 exhibit.

It would take a lifetime of travel to see as much of the world and its people as anyone can see in a couple of weeks at the World's Fair.

EDUCATION

A great Fair is, perhaps, the greatest of all educational institutions. The education is easy to take, because it is mingled with entertainment. I have been going to World's Fairs all my life, and I can attribute a large part of my education to things I saw at the big shows, from the Philadelphia Centennial of 1876 on. As a small boy I got my first understanding of mechanical power by watching the great Corliss engine in Machinery Hall. The huge statue sculptured out of butter indelibly impressed Minnesota's eminence as a dairy state upon my childish imagination. I saw Prof. Bell's first crude telephone and Dr. Brush's primitive electric arc light and understood them when they came into general use a few years later.

Chicago's Columbian Exposition of 1893 taught me many things, particularly about beauty in architecture. The Pan-American Exposition of 1901 certainly enlarged my knowledge of Brazil and other South American countries. I have seen much about China as I could have got in a year of travel there, at the St. Louis World Fair of 1904 where I got acquainted with Prince Pu-Lun, nephew of the Dowager Empress.

I expect to add materially to my education at the New York and San Francisco World's Fairs of 1939, and so will everybody else who goes to either of them.

LAND

Both the New York World's Fair and that in San Francisco are being built on "made" land, which will become public parks after the shows are over. That, too, is customary in World's Fairs. Philadelphia's Centennial left Fairmount Park as an inheritance to the people. Chicago's Columbian Exposition made what is now Jackson Park, and so on.

New York World's Fair is going up on what was a combination of mosquito-breeding swamp and ash-dump, between the suburbs of Corona and Flushing on Long Island, close to the geographical centre of the great city which covers five counties. The city bought the land for a future park and leased it to the World's Fair management, which has spent millions of dollars in an incredible amount of labor in filling the swamp, removing the ash heaps, deepening and straightening the lakes and water courses. After the Fair the city will have a huge waterfront park to play in.

San Francisco's Fair of 1939 will be on a brand-new island in beautiful San Francisco Bay, "Treasure Island" has been dredged up from the bottom

FEAT AND PHOSPHATE AID POULTRY MANURE

The progressive poultry husbandman pays careful attention to the feeding of his flock knowing the importance of a diet properly balanced with proteins, carbohydrates and fats for the maintenance of vigorous health and productivity. Neither will he fail to include a suitable mineral supplement in the feed, so that the birds may be protected against deficiency diseases which are responsible for rickets, crooked breast-bones, sterile eggs and lowered vitality generally.

Whether the fowl be engaged primarily in the laying of eggs or in legging on flesh for the table, they may play a by-product which renders more attention than it usually receives. Poultry manure is richest of all natural manures in the by-product element, using in preference to other manures an inferior product which, in dried form, is imported to Canada in large quantities and applied to lawns, chiefly by townfolk who may have exaggerated notions of its efficiency.

There are already many poultrymen, says B. Leslie Ennis, who have adopted the practice of using a granular phosphate in their poultry houses scattering the material daily on the dropping boards or in the pits under the roosts. While some do this primarily for the purpose of suppressing odors, they are also appreciating the value of the manure, as the phosphate not only retards fermentation and conserves valuable ammonia nitrogen by combining it, but it itself adds phosphorus, the plant food substance in which all natural manures are deficient. In other words, the addition of granular phosphate makes the manure a better balanced fertilizer.

There are others who have considered the possibility of marketing dried poultry manure which has been reinforced with phosphate and mixed with the peat litter used in the poultry house. Peat is an excellent absorbent. A statement issued from the agricultural experiment station of New Jersey indicates that from ten to eight pounds of droppings per week may be obtained and observed that to this quantity of manure two pounds of granular phosphate should be added—scattered under the roosts—to balance its fertility.

The idea has been fostered largely in Canada by L. C. Roy, agricultural agent for the Canadian National Railways, who recognizes the superior qualities of peat as a litter. The admixture of poultry droppings with peat has manifold advantages. Peat possesses great affinity for ammonia which it conserves and releases gradually in the soil, while the poultry droppings furnish the bacteria which promote the decomposition of the peat. It is an ideal combination and merits the consideration of the poultryman who would make a profit out of his by-product as well and not have all his eggs in one basket.

INCREASED GERMINATION MAKES SEED GO FURTHER

Eleven million bushels of wheat, oats and barley are being distributed by ten provincial governments of Saskatchewan and Alberta to provide seed for the crop of 1938 in districts where the devastating drought of 1937 left farmers destitute. Some hundred fewer bushels than they planned, and the meagre supply of shrunken grain, too weak to germinate, served only to partially satisfy the food craving of their starving cattle.

The governmental measure for aiding these unfortunate farmers will be administered with economy, says B. Leslie Ennis, and none will receive a quantity of seed grain adequate for the sowing of all the acres he would wish to put in crop. Consequently, the desire to make the seed grain go as far as possible is bound to result in light seeding on many areas. There is a way to make the seed go further, a way known to all agronomists in the government service and to many of the farmers who will be recipients of the bounty. It is through the treatment of the seed with organic mercury dust at the rate of only one-half ounce per bushel. This inexpensive treatment not only controls bunt of wheat, covered smut and stripe of wheat, and root and foot rot, but promotes vigorous germination and increased yields.

Government representatives considered the advisability of pre-treating all seed sent out but were deterred by the fear that some might be tempted to feed part of it to livestock, in amounts which might prove toxic. Fortunately, the cost of treatment is so small that the farmer need not be denied the advantage.

Turkey is wheat exporter; Brazilian wheat bread flour must contain 30 per cent domestic flour; Uruguay has larger wheat crop than last year; good crop conditions in Chile.

Eventually, it seems to me, the full 90 per cent increase in the prices of all goods, commodities, wages and salaries, must take place, for history tells us that ever in the past the prices of all things have increased, after a time by exactly the same percentage as the money was inflated.

Following factors have tended to lower price—European crops mostly satisfactory; moderate rains benefit Argentine corn; timely mows prevent crop damage in Danubian countries;

FOR BETTER HEALTH

BY DR. J. ROSSLYN EARP

DIAGNOSIS

For the treatment of disease we pay willingly, especially if treatment is associated with an operating theater or with some modern electric machine. But for the diagnosis of disease, for finding out what exactly is wrong with us, we expect to pay little or nothing. And we are willing to trust almost any opinion if it is given with assurance.

Perhaps this is because the plumber, the radio engineer, the automobile mechanic charge only for the repairs they make. We are used to that system and fail to realize that the human body is a machine far more delicate, complicated and individual than any radio. The greatest experts in medicine freely admit that they have often made mistakes in diagnosis. Because of their blind faith in incompetent or fraudulent dispensers of "cures," some people pay large sums of money for the treatment of cancer, yet never suffer from cancer at all. Afterwards they write grateful testimonials to the man who is supposed to have cured them. This is true also of other diseases.

If anyone doing a private business in any of the so-called healing arts offers free examination, it means one of two things: either his examination is worth nothing, or he is repaying himself for the examination by his charge for the treatment. The second alternative is the more dangerous, means that the examiner is under a temptation to prescribe treatment in order that he may get paid for his services.

Be willing to pay generously for diagnosis. It will save you money. It may even save your life.

MACHINERY HAS STRAIGHTENED UP THIS SHAPE

Millet, the French artist, son of a farmer and himself a farm laborer, has in his universally known pictures of—The Gleamers, The Man with the Hoe, etc., left a very graphic record of farming methods and their influence on farm workers of a century ago.

Edwin Markham, the American poet, viewing The Man with the Hoe, interprets it to us with dramatic force in his poem of the same name when he says,

Who loosened and let down this brutal jaw;
Whose hand that slanted back this brow;
Whose breath blew out the light within this brain.

Ringing out the challenge, he asks—"Is this the thing the Lord, God made and gave dominion over land and sea," and calls on "Masters, Lords and Rulers of all lands to straighten up this shape."

But each step in this great emancipation has come by the introduction of some new labor-saving machine. Thus by liberating man from back-breaking, brain-deadening toil, modern machinery has done more than all the masters, lords and rulers of all lands to straighten up this shape.

For ninety years now Massey-Harris has played a conspicuous part in designing and making such labor-saving machines and in the development of power and power equipment for farm operations.

THE WORLD WILL ALWAYS NEED O.A.'S

(By John Edwin Price)

Even in Russia, these men get more money. What men? Why, the O.A.'s. I'm going to tell you about them. These men are like a woman in this community, several women, in fact.

In every Ladies Aid society there is at least one woman who can make a church supper a great success. This woman may not be able to bake as well as the next one. But when she takes hold of an affair the good cooks like to work for her. Why? Because they know their efforts will not be in vain. The woman is an O.A. (Organizing Accomplisher, to you, Oswald).

Carnegie became great because he surrounded himself with men who knew more than he did. But through him they accomplished more than the best of them could have done without him.

Other men had ideas about gas engines when Henry Ford was first working in his little garage. But Henry was an O.A.

This doesn't mean simply that he could think out plans for mass manufacturing. He had the tireless urge that begins, organizes, directs and sees things brought to a satisfying and satisfactory conclusion.

The world needs trained craftsmen and loyal persevering laborers. These are today coming into their own as never before. The world also needs men who save something of what they earn. However, the best machinery would be useless, the most expert workmen would be twiddling their thumbs and wealth would be good for nothing but to hold the mould of months of idleness were it not for the man with a plan, the man who can, the man with an inner fire that burns relentlessly until desired results are achieved.

Then let's say, "Hats off to the O.A.'s and a generous consideration for them at the pay-off!"

WHEN THERE'S NO ADVERTISING

The editor of the Teeswater News is right now facing the alternative of discontinuing to put out a money-losing sheet which for many months has carried no local advertising. Two weeks ago, the editor, in an item on the front page, hinted that Teeswater might soon be without a weekly newspaper, unless the merchants and business men of the town would come forward and provide some support by taking advertising space. He pointed out that he was being constantly criticized on the style of the paper he was editing, but what better could be expected by citizens who had diametrically in supporting such an important business as a newspaper and job printing plant. The merchants simply shrugged their shoulders and this week's issue carries exactly one paid advertisement. The news carries another comment, as follows: "By the stream of Post Office, Express and Bank Money Orders leaving Teeswater, these days, mostly payable to Eaton's or Simpson's one would be led to believe there were no merchants in our town selling goods. Well, the merchants will not advertise to the public that they have goods to sell, and Eaton's and Simpson's have pages of display advertising to show what they have; it just seems natural to buy where they tell you what they have and the price of the purchase. Fanny, it pays the big fellow to advertise and allows them to grow larger and larger, and the lack of advertising allows the local dealer to grow smaller and smaller."

How true indeed are the words of the News editor. It is astonishing to number of non-advertisers who simply cannot, or will not, see the advertising light. The Star receives support from some of the merchants and business men, all of whom appreciate the true value of the printed advertisement. Supporting the weekly paper, their customers, but there are several who are still living in the kerens lamp age under the misapprehension that because they are located on Main Street, have a sign over the door and sell merchandise the equal of their competitors, that the customers will beat a path to their store.

Such is not the case. Today, whether it be the lady of the house looking for a piece of dress goods, or the man of the house, who is in need of a new plough, they insist on value for their money and see to it that they get just that — they consult mail order catalogues, they read the daily and weekly newspaper ads, and when they find out what they want to buy, they make the purchase.

As a result of this watchfulness by the shoppers, it is the store which tells its story to the buying public through the medium of regular advertising that gets the big end of the business. Advertising today more than ever before, is a necessity, but there are still some business men who can't see the light. They insist upon driving up-to-date motor cars, but they don't give their business the benefit of modern advertising.

Advertising That's Really Interesting

Massey-Harris Company has a rather interesting and fascinating story to tell and it is making a fine job of it in an excellent series of advertisements just issued for publication. The Company has chosen a select list of weekly newspapers to carry the campaign. The first of the series appears in this issue of the Star and the proofs of the advertisements to follow show that the standard set in story and illustration is well sustained and that they are worthy of more than the casual glance.

This pioneer manufacturer of farm machinery and power equipment — an entirely Canadian organization, of over ninety years' experience — has been closely associated with the development of Western Canada and has played an important part in providing equipment to enable farming to be put on a profitable basis.

The advertisements remind us of the changes that have taken place in farming of the elimination of the back-breaking work common to farming methods in the not so long ago, and of the transformation that has been wrought and which is now taken so much for granted.

Old timers like to tell of the day the first binder came on their farms, and of the headbanging of the old wisecracks of the community as they predicted it couldn't be done — but it is a far cry from those days to the present time in which the binder has come to take a back seat to the more wonderful innovations of the power binder and the combine — cutting, hagger, sweeper and thrasher all at one and the same time. And one of the nice things about these later introductions is the work that they save the women on the farm — even if we only mention the absence of the large harvesting and threshing crews that were the glory of every farm woman in the "good old days".

The big advantage, however, of the new equipment is the help it has given in reducing the cost of raising crops. One farmer who keeps track of expenses says that a 3000-bushel crop from 100 acres planted, harvested and threshed with the newest diesel seeder and reaper-thresher, cost him only 54c a bushel as against 144c per bushel with the old horse equipment and separate thrasher method — a saving of 90 per bushel, or a 60 per cent cut in the cost of producing the wheat.

It is the supplying of such equipment as this that is going to give farmers an opportunity to make some real money in the western country when they do get a chance at a crop.

WILD LANDS TAXED

AT 2 CENTS PER ACRE

Under provisions of a bill respecting taxation of Wild Lands introduced into the legislature last week by Hon. Lucien Maynard, minister of municipal affairs, there will be a tax of two cents per acre levied on such lands "or at such lesser rate as may be fixed".

The bill was brought into the house after the minister had obtained approval of a resolution permitting same.

Purpose of the bill is set forth as follows: "For the purpose of a fund to or supplementing revenue, there is to be annually assessed, levied and collected on all lands in the province not exempt from taxation under the Act to be called the Wild Lands Tax at the rate of two cents per acre or at such lesser rate as may be fixed."

NICE WORDS—IF YOU CAN GET 'EM

On and after the coming into operation of the new Constitution new amended forms of title in Irish of certain Ministers and officials of the government will (writes an Irish Times correspondent) be introduced to replace those at present in use. Certain abbreviations employed in the spelling of Irish surnames and phrases are apparently not looked upon in Gaelic-speaking circles as "good Irish" and some of those in use for several years past disappear from the new titles referred to below which have been announced and approved by the Government:

Aire Airgid (Minister of Finance) becomes An Aire Airgeadais.
Aire Dli agus Cirt (Minister for Justice) becomes An Aire Dighluist agus Cirt.

Aire Riailais Aitla agus Staitis Fuail (Minister for Local Government and Public Health) becomes An Aire Rialaitaile Aileamhaigh agus Staitis Fuailthe.

Aire Gnóthaí Coigríoch (Minister for External Affairs) becomes An Aire Gnóthaí Eochtracha.

Aire Talmhaíochta (Minister for Agriculture) becomes An Aire Talmhaíochta.

The Irish title of the Attorney-General will in future be "An Aire Ailgine".

The helms to the crown of the kingdom of the Netherlands, Princess Juliana, is a redhead.

The DIAL REVIEW

by Walter Davis

Wainwright's wonder boy, Jack Benny, breaks records every day. Four years in a row, radio editors have voted his comedy act "the tops". Now Mary Livingstone lets Jack's birthday and St. Valentine's day go by without a poem — and that should establish a record of sorts. Furthermore Jack has lately been voted one of the ten best dressed men in the United States.

Right now, Jack and his gang have a record-breaking number of sets tuned CJCA-wards, Sundays at 6 p.m.

Anne Jamieson, lovely Canadian lyric soprano, singing star of "Hollywood Hotel" Fridays, 7 to 8 p.m. (CJBC-CJCA). Anne, born in Ireland, was brought up in India and in Canada. In Toronto she attended the Conservatory of Music and was for two years also heard in concert and radio recitals. A few years ago she visited New York where she did radio work and later went to the film capital. After an audition she was immediately signed as a regular member of "Hollywood Hotel".

Congratulations to Ed Bryant for his radio description of Sir Hubert Wilkins' landing at Edmonton Airport, and his intelligent summing up of the search for the lost Russian flyers. And also to Bill Cranston for his skilful interviewing of Sir Hubert and other members of the party.

RADIO QUESTION BOX

Q. What is the difference between gramophone records and electrical transcriptions?—B.T.

Ans. Gramophone records are made to be sold to the public. Transcriptions are made for radio only; and are recorded less formally, as though the artists were actually on the air. Transcriptions run at the rate of thirty-three and one-third revolutions per minute, while records revolve at the rate of 78 turns per minute.

Canadian Winter Eggs Please British Housewives

A new branch of Canadian commerce has been established in the shipping of winter-produced eggs to Great Britain. A more officially inaugurated January 13 when the Canadian Pacific freighter Beaver was sailed from Saint John with the first carload shipment. A week before, the sister ship Beaver had carried a sample shipment overseas, the first Canadian winter-produced eggs ever sent to Great Britain. Up till then only "storage eggs" had been shipped, England receiving her fresh eggs from Continental countries. Canadian government officials stated this was a progressive step would boost the Canadian product above the standard of Australian eggs and bring them into competition with poultry supplies from Denmark, drawing better prices for Canadian farmers.

Photos above show: Department of Agriculture "light-box" test for freshness after which each egg is individually stamped "Canada," indicating eggs fresh from Canada. The Beaver is shown sailing from Saint John with the first carload shipment and the smiling British housewife who won distinction as being the first user of the Canadian fresh eggs "putting the finger on her package of 'first'." She said: "They're delicious; much better than the foreign imported eggs. With Canadian bacon they form a wonderful meal!"

The Legion Notice Board

We are happy to report the reinstatement of Comrade Gore-Hickman of Vegreville, who was dismissed from office by the provincial government and reinstated by Premier Abernethy after an interview with the Provincial President of the Canadian Legion, Alex Walker. Comrade Walker was well supported by resolutions, wires and letters from practically all branches in the northern half of the province and it is gratifying and encouraging to know that this time our efforts on behalf of a comrade were successful.

An interesting item in the daily press having to do with the abolition of the Pension Appeal Court appeared recently. It certainly seems ridiculous that after an applicant has been examined by a quorum of commission at a public hearing with witnesses and a decision in his favor arrived at, that he should be at the mercy of a court at which he cannot appear nor can he be represented. The trouble is that some 75 percent of such cases are adjudged against the applicant and there is no reason.

Clause 73 of the Pension Act says that the applicant shall be entitled to the benefit of the doubt and we would very much like to hear of even one case where this held good.

The "Tough Guy" Who Went Through High-School in Three Months And Wrote Fifty-One Books In Eighteen Years

A little over forty years ago, a hobo rode the rods of a freight train into Buffalo and began to beg for food from door to door. A policeman arrested him for vagrancy, and a judge sentenced him to thirty-days at hard labor in the penitentiary. Yet six years later this hobo was the most sought-after man on the Western coast.

He was Jack London, author of The Call of the Wild.

When Jack London wrote The Call of the Wild back in 1903, he became famous overnight. Editors clamored for his work. But he made very little money from his first big hit. The publishers—and later the movie producers in Hollywood—made a million dollars out of it, but he himself sold all his rights to The Call of the Wild for only two thousand dollars.

If you want to write a book, the very first requisite is to have something to write about. That was one of the secrets of Jack London's astonishing success. He packed ten thousand colorful experiences into his short and feverish life.

Jack London's childhood was marked by poverty and hardship. He laughed at schools and played hockey most of the time. Yet one day he wandered into a public library and began reading Robinson Crusoe. He was fascinated. The next day he rushed back to the library to read other books. From that time on he had an unquenchable passion for books. He often read ten and fifteen hours a day. He devoured everything from Nick Carter to Shakespeare—whatever came from Herbert Spencer to Karl Marx. When he was nineteen, he decided to stop selling his muscles and sell his brain instead.

So, at the age of nineteen, he entered high school in Oakland, California. He studied night and day, literature. That was in 1896, five years later, in 1903, he had published six books, and one hundred and twenty-five short stories, and was one of the most talked-of men in literary America.

Jack London died in 1916, at the age of forty, only eighteen years after he really started to write, and during that time he wrote an average of about three books a year besides countless stories.

EARLENE WHITE President of The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc.

Her familiarity with various languages and her excellent voice have made Miss Lisa Sergio one of the best known radio personalities in Italy. She began by presenting news bulletins in English, then in French and German. When she came to America recently to visit the family of her mother, who was a Fitzgerald of Baltimore and married Count Sergio of Italy, her voice and her reputation on the air attracted a broad-casting company here, so she it for the time being a guest announcer.

Mayor LaGuardia of New York has a theory that policemen can be used for very effective police and detective work in a large city, and he expressed personal gratification recently when he pinned a detective's badge on Miss Mary A. Shanley, a patrolwoman who, for valor, was made a second grade detective. The honor was a recognition of her work in keeping two suspicious characters under surveillance for six hours and finally arresting them.

Mending violins is more than a job, it's an art, and Mrs. Mays Badgett of Atlanta, Ga., found she could do very well at it, even though she had never taken lessons and at the time was from having watched her husband work. Mr. Badgett was the creator of exquisite violins as well as an expert repairer. He was known by some of the finest violinists in the world, who sent him their instruments to repair. When Mr. Badgett died his wife took over the shop and in three years had become an expert.

The Penthouse Murders

"Tony," he went on, addressing Detective Martinelli, "go down and bring the janitor up here. He can tell whether anyone went to the bathroom to-night unless he's in the house. He might have a set of keys to every apartment in the house."

"But hardly a motive for this shooting or the opportunity to poison this pistol from the Highgate Studios," remarked Michaelis. "And that suggests to be that we have been overlooking a possibility. Where is Miss Lane's maid? What is she? Does she usually stay out all night on Saturday night? When did she go out, if anybody knows? Where does she go when she goes out?"

"Worth looking into, Dan?"

"You bet that's worth looking into," replied the Inspector. "Archib, you must know something about her. What do you say?"

"She's a French girl named Adele—I don't remember her last name if I ever heard it. She had been with Miss Lane for three or four years, I believe. She acts as her personal maid as well as looking after the apartment here."

"Accompanies her to the Highgate Studios does she?" asked Michaelis.

"Yes, nearly always. She serves toned to hanging up her own things—admits him, thinking perhaps that it is Archie or her maid coming back. He has learned of her promise to marry Doane and is furious.

"They quarrel, usually, Adele, and perhaps is really afraid of him and may have taken the pistol from the property room at the studio for self-defense, comes in and misinterprets her alterations—or perhaps interprets correctly Adele's intentions to send her mistress. She obtains the pistol from the place where she had concealed it first at Fitz and, missing him, wounds Miss Lane. Fitz rushes to take the gun from her—he was no coward—and she shoots him through the heart as he overtakes her in the hall by the telephone stand.

"What would a servant naturally do then in a panic? She would call for help, hide the pistol and vanish. Where would a servant naturally think of hiding a revolver? In the cellar. She had both keys to the apartment. She could slip down to the cellar without being noticed.

"Archib," he went on, suddenly turning to Doane, "are you sure it was Miss Lane's voice you heard over the telephone? It could not have been that of Adele, by any chance?"

The janitor's bearing suggested honesty and intelligence.

as Miss Lane's cremer."

"She could have got possession of this revolver, would you say?"

"Yes, there is no doubt that she could. She is on friendly terms with everybody at the studio and has the run of the place.

"Has she been at the studio since you last saw this revolver—last Thursday, you said it was?"

"Yes, Miss Lane plays opposite me in the film we are now making, and we were working until Friday night. Adele was with her on Friday, I am sure."

"Was there any suggestion, at any time, of any animosity between Miss Lane and Adele?"

"No more than between Miss Lane and myself, so far as I know. The maid seemed devoted to her mistress."

"In the temperamental—Adele, I mean? Quick tempered? Easily offended? The type that might do violent things under the stress of sudden rage?"

"You are asking for an opinion, Max," Inspector Flaherty interrupted. "Let him tell you the facts that might have a bearing on your question."

"I yield to the police on a point of law," replied Michaelis, smiling. "What about it, Archie?"

"She threatened to shoot Fitz, once, if he didn't stop pestering her," replied Doane. "You know how he was with women. He laughed it off, but he kept out of Adele's way after that."

"Did you see or hear that incident yourself?" asked the lawyer.

"No, but it was generally gossiped around the studio."

"I suggest again, Dan, that you ought to find this girl, Adele," said Michaelis. "You can conceive, as well as I, a situation something like this:

"Miss Lane comes home—never mind the time when she comes in, now. Her maid is out for the evening as usual on Saturdays. Fitzgerald calls. Miss Lane, in negligee—her outer garments on the chair where we found them, because she is not accusing in ordinary conversation, it's subconscious with them."

"Still, I see something in Max's idea," said the Inspector. "Has Tony come up with the janitor yet? Tony brings your man in here and takes some questions."

"I want you to go through everything in the maid's room next to the kitchenette, and see if you can find any letters or anything which will give a clue to her relations or associates. Her name is Adele Something-or-other—French. She goes out every Saturday and stays all night. Perhaps she has a husband or a lover. Anyway, I want that girl found, get me? I want her in my office at—shall we say twelve hours from now, gentlemen, to meet in my office?"

"What would a servant naturally do then in a panic? She would call for help, hide the pistol and vanish. Where would a servant naturally think of hiding a revolver? In the cellar. She had both keys to the apartment. She could slip down to the cellar without being noticed.

"Archib," he went on, suddenly turning to Doane, "are you sure it was Miss Lane's voice you heard over the telephone? It could not have been that of Adele, by any chance?"

"Did you ever see what the janitor says," he went on, as Martinelli left the room to begin his search for Adele.

The janitor turned out to be a well-preserved, middle-aged man, whose bearing suggested honesty and intelligence. He saluted Inspector Flaherty and stood at attention as the latter addressed him.

"Did you ever see what the janitor before?" the inspector asked, indifferently.

"Yes. I've seen him coming and going out with Miss Lane on many occasions."

"Did you see him come into the house tonight?"

"Yes, I was sweeping the sidewalk after the snow had stopped when the gentleman drove up in a taxi. He seemed in a great hurry. He pushed the bell button for one of the apartments—I suppose for Miss Lane's—several times, then, tried the front door. I don't know whether Miss Lane had pressed the button in her apartment which releases the front door latch, or not. It wasn't necessary, as it happened, because I had come out without my keys and had set the night latch so that I could get in without trouble. The gentleman—Mr. Doane?—went in and I did not see him again."

"He did not go to the cellar at any time tonight?" asked the Inspector.

"Not unless he went there immediately on entering the house," was the reply. "I went in not more than a minute or two behind him, fastened the front door so that only persons with latchkeys could enter, and went down to the cellar to bank my fire. I sat there waiting to close the drafts."

"What time after that was he stationed in front called for you. Nobody came into the cellar in that time, I am sure."

"H'm," said Inspector Flaherty. "You stand like a soldier. Were you ever in the Army?"

"No, but I was on the force, sir. Retired for disability two years ago, and with my pension and the wages I get here I'm managing to send a boy through college. Name's Jenkins, sir."

"I'll take your statement as true, Jenkins," said the Inspector. "One thing more do you know the girl who works for Miss Lane—Adele?"

"Adele Marceau? Very well, sir. She's a fine young woman. We get along very well together; she calls me 'Uncle.' You see, I'm French on my mother's side and I've always had the language, so she likes to come down and talk to me. I hope she isn't mixed up in this terrible affair, sir? Is it true that Miss Lane will put through?"

"It looks that way," the Inspector replied. "We don't know how deep your friend Adele may be in this, or whether she's in it at all. Has she been in your cellar this evening, by any chance?"

"Early in the evening, sir. She came to give me a French newspaper about six o'clock that would be, or a little before. Miss Lane had just come in, she said, and was off for the night."

"Did she have anything else in her hand besides the newspaper?"

"Only a bag, such as ladies carry their lipsticks and such in."

"Was it possible that she had a revolver? You saw the one that was

Hints for the Household

Conducted By Betty Barclay

LUNCHEON FUEL

During cold weather the luncheon salad should contain more vegetables than light summer salads. The body needs more fuel to withstand the cold. Here are two salads containing such healthful foods as eggs, cheese, ham and dried Lima beans. Try them either for lunch or as dinner salads.

SAVORY LIMA SALAD

2 cups cooked, dried Lima
1/2 cup finely cut celery
2 small green onions
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
2 hard-cooked eggs
2 tablespoons chopped Pimiento
1 cucumber, sliced
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Combine all ingredients and mix with highly seasoned French dressing. Arrange on lettuce leaves.

HARLEQUIN SALAD

1 cup cooked dried Lima
1 1/2 cups finely chopped tongue or ham
3 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
1 tomato, peeled and sliced
1/2 cup chopped pickles
1 head lettuce
Sour cream or mayonnaise salad dressing
Wash and combine meat, Lima, eggs and pickles. Mix with French dressing, let stand 1 hour in a cold place. Pile on a bed of lettuce and garnish with the sliced tomato.

STEAMED ARTICHOKE

Wash artichokes thoroughly and cut off the stems. Place them compactly in a pot and sprinkle with onion, parsley and ham (which has been chopped very fine). Steam slowly until tender, about forty minutes, without removing the lid. Serve with drawn butter, Hollandaise sauce, or whatever sauce may be desired.

ARTICHOKE AND ONION SALAD

Boil the artichokes until tender. When cold cut them into halves. Discard the cone of immature leaves and the fuzzy base on which it rests, just above the tender heart. Sprinkle the centers with finely chopped raw onion and finely chopped raw parsley. Pour over them a French dressing.

CREAM CRANBERRY COMPOTE

1 package vanilla
1 small package
1 cup fresh milk
1 cup light cream
1/2 cup sugar
1 cup cranberries
1/2 cup water
To make cranberry sauce: Boil sugar and water together 5 minutes. Add cranberries and boil without stirring until the skins pop open (about 5 minutes). Remove from fire and allow to cool.

To make rennet-custard: Follow directions on package, using 1 cup milk and 1 cup cream instead of 1 pint of milk. Chill in refrigerator. When ready to serve, put 1 tablespoon of cranberry sauce on each dish of dessert.

found in your chimney clean-out. Could she have put that there at any time—or at any time?" the Inspector demanded.

"It's possible of course, but I should say unlikely, sir," replied Jenkins. "I was getting the ash cans up to the sidewalk on the boat when she came down, and how long she has been there I couldn't say. She stopped only a moment after I saw her. Just gave me the paper, and she was off to her other job."

"Her other job, eh? What's that?" "I forgot you don't know, sir. For that matter, even Miss Lane doesn't know. Adele was afraid she might not like her earning the extra money so she let Miss Lane think she had a lover. But she works in a night club every Saturday night. It's their busy time, you know, and they put on extra act. I believe—something quite Parisian, a la Montmartre. If you understand what that means."

"A bit off color, eh? Does she do this act under her real name?"

SWEDISH COOKIES

2 cups butter
4 cups sifted cake flour
1 cup sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
Sift flour once; measure. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add flour, a small amount at a time, mixing thoroughly after each addition. Add vanilla and blend. Shape into 2-rolls, 1 1/2 inches in diameter, chill overnight or until firm enough to slice, and cut in thin slices. Or press dough through cookie press. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in hot oven (400 F) 4 to 5 minutes, or until done. Makes 5 dozen cookies.

HOT LEMONADE

(Serves 1)
1 tablespoon sugar
1/2 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Add sugar to boiling water and stir until dissolved. Add lemon juice and serve.
Another method for making hot lemonade is to slice a lemon (including skin) and pour boiling water over it. Let stand 10 minutes, add sugar and serve.

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

BILIOUSNESS

Biliousness is a word which holds its place in every-day language to describe a state of mental depression and physical discomfort, which is marked by headache, dizziness, a mouth which tastes bitter, a feeling of nausea, weakness and depression, together with constipation.

The popular idea is that this unhappy state is due to what is called a "sluggish liver". This idea apparently comes from the fact that when a so-called bilious person vomits—and he generally does—the contracting waves of the stomach draw up a small amount of bile. This small amount of bile is sufficient by its yellow color and bitter taste to convince the patient that all his trouble arose from his liver which produces the bile.

The liver is a very reliable organ and it does its best, but sometimes the excess of food and drink, or the failure to eliminate wastes from the body may give rise to a condition with which the liver cannot cope and so it rebels. It is not the liver alone which protests, but other parts of the digestive tract will join with it, producing the form of disorder which the public, if not the doctors, know as "biliousness".

The relationship of mental efficiency to bodily health is seen in the sad look and gloomy spirits of the victims of digestive apathy. The way to a man's heart may be through his stomach; certainly, the way to his good or ill humor is by way of his digestive tract.

The treatment is not by "liver pills" or purgatives, but through the correction of faulty habits; this means regular food, outdoor exercise, plenty of sleep, and a freer use of water between meals. Regular elimination can be secured by habit, diet and exercise.

Biliousness does not trouble those who lead a fairly simple life, who avoid excesses of one kind and another, who pay reasonable attention to the requirements of their bodies, and who pay attention to their food and their elimination instead of taking medicines.

Some people think that they are born bilious, but in so doing they are only blaming their ancestors for what is really their own carelessness with regard to their eating and other habits.

The United States Federal Food and Drugs Act was passed in 1906.

BUSINESS MEN LIKE THIS EXPENSE ITEM

Paying money out is always less pleasant than taking it in. Expense items are headaches for the business man, with one exception.

Money paid for advertising is the single exception. It's the only expenditure a business executive will regard with pleasure, for well he knows his money is being invested, not lost.

Advertising is an investment -- something paid out today to assure greater income tomorrow. Building demand for merchandise thru advertising is just as important as buying goods. Advertising not only creates demand and builds good-will; it makes money for the man who uses it.

Books That Matter

WHAT THE UNITED STATES
CAN TEACH CANADA
By Chris Edwin Sifton

Divided We Stand: By Walter Prescott Webb. (Toronto: Oxford Press) Price, $2.50
The New America: The Story of the C.C.C.: by A. C. Oliver and Harold M. Dudley. (Toronto: Longman's) Price, $1.75.

A few weeks ago, we reviewed in this column three books on "The Future of the United States." By some slip, not attributable to any false modesty, we forgot to attach the name of the reviewer to the column. Hence the opinions expressed there might perhaps be improperly attributed to either the Association of Canadian Bookmen or to the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association. We hasten therefore to assume full responsibility for that review and would remind our readers that when we commenced these literary excursions we were assured of freedom to write as we chose.

The two books mentioned this week deal primarily with the situation in the United States, but they have a peculiar value for Canadian readers. "Divided We Stand" should certainly be read by every member of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations, while "This New America" gives a very vital interpretation of the work of the Civilian Conservation Corps which should be pondered by every Canadian interested in youth rehabilitation.

DIVIDED WE STAND

Walter Prescott Webb is the professor of history at the University of Texas. In his book he points out that though the West and the South furnish the bulk of the raw materials such as cotton and oil (but not coal) in the States, most of the population and a still larger percentage of the wealth is in the Northern States, and that in almost every commercial transaction the southerner and the westerner pay tribute to the north. In the North are 90% of the 200 largest non-banking corporations, 84% of the firms that sell merchandise to the retail drug stores fifty-five of the 75 leading insurance companies and these fifty-five companies have over 98% of the total annual income received by all the insurance companies! The North also furnishes 83% of the income taxes. Canadians will seem to recall somewhat similar allegations raised by the Canadian west and the Maritimes against Ontario and Quebec. The analogy is arresting.

But Prof. Webb probes very deeply as he asks what has been responsible for this servitude or, as he calls it, "the rise of America's feudal system" based not on land but on finance capitalism. He plunges a bit abruptly into the Civil War and does not perhaps take sufficient cognizance of the developments that antedated the Civil War and involved the conflict of the plantation system based on slavery with the more economically efficient reliance of the North on craftsmanship, manufacturing, shipping, etc. And he fails to designate the inevitable dependence of all frontier civilizations for capital on the more settled areas; also the tendency of pioneers, once they have accumulated their wealth, to return to the more settled areas to spend it.

Nevertheless there is no getting away from the Civil War and its economic consequences. The North, our author says, "Reduced to the vanishing point the economic power of the South, practically during the war and further after the war." Fortunately, that is a tragedy which we in Canada have been spared. It was inevitable that the triumphant North should take the lead over the impoverished South in the economic exploitation of the opening West. But one wonders if it might not have done so even if there had been no Civil War. Perhaps the slave system did something to the mentality of the slave-owners which made them less agile in some kinds of business transactions. But that is our own idea; not the author's.

Prof. Webb traces the economic mastery of the North rather to the rise of the corporation as a legal entity with full "juridical personality" ever moving forward through its purchases of patents to the control of the machine, and through its power to crush the small competitor to a position of practical monopoly with a capacity to assess a whole people whatever it thought that the traffic would stand. More incisive even than this analysis is his contention that when juridical personality is given the corporation, it receives the privileges and immunities of personality without the responsibilities. It is really given a favored position over individuals. A corporation can't be put in jail; a person may be imprisoned. A corporation does not die; persons do die as family corporations have discovered. The corporation, once grown large enough, really becomes a government within the government, ever claiming new privileges while it repudiates all responsibility. "If a corporation employs a man and finds that he does not fit into the system, it discharges him; but the government cannot discharge a citizen for inefficiency, incompetence or old age."

Here, Prof. Webb really describes the fatal weakness in the system we unintelligently call capitalism. That weakness is not in its desire for profits, nor in its insistence on private property, but in the irresponsible, monopolistic nature of impersonal corporations, often careless to its own shareholders as to its employees, which govern us against our will and, unlike governments, too often refuse to accept responsibility for their own mistakes. In his closing chapter, he suggests that since or if these corporations cannot be adequately controlled by governments, perhaps the best thing to do would be to amend the constitution and give them, on a basis of responsibility, the real powers of government. "They tell us that business can do almost anything if government will only let it alone. The self-appraisal might be modified if we give them a few real jobs with duties instead of privileges as a spur" (Page 236).

This, we fear, would prove the pons asinorum of capitalism, but perhaps the corporations might surprise us. Of course, it would mean the junking of democracy and the adoption of Italian fascism or "corporatism" with a vengeance, but it might work. But if the governments cannot now induce the corporations to accept responsibilities as well as privileges, what chance is there that they will accept the responsibilities if we really did turn the government over to them? Nevertheless it does get to the heart of things and is a "must" book for all who want to understand the basic and political problems on the North American continent.

THE NEW AMERICA

"This New America" is hardly an ordered account of the Civilian Conservation Corps, but for the most part, a compilation of comments on the C.C.C. by officers and men employed, chaplains and teachers, and extracts from camp newspapers including a whole chapter of poems written by enrollees! The value of the book is in the fact that it does impart the spirit of the enterprise which Canada would do well to emulate.

If, instead of leaving our young men between 18 and 25 to utter frustration we had recruited them, especially from the families on relief, sent them to camps for young men only, set them to work on schemes of forest and soil conservation, building roads and trails through national and provincial parks combined these activities with a comprehensive educational program directed by first class education, we would have been creating economic wealth and saving it for the future instead of merely dissipating it in "relief"; and above all, we would have been saving manhood and developing a high spirit of real patriotism among youth instead of evoking the understandable criticism that we were indifferent to the legitimate aspirations of youth. And what would it not have meant to the physical health of our young men?

We in Canada lost a great chance when we failed to develop a peace army for specific age groups as a sound economic and educational project. Perhaps it is still not too late to do something before the next war; if there is time, let our political leaders saturate themselves in the spirit of "This New America".

ROAD PLANS IN

THEPHONE SPEECH

Boosters for hard surfacing of highways in Alberta were given much encouragement by the speech from the throne, read at the opening of the provincial legislature on February 10. While not disclosing any details of the work proposed for this year, the speech referred to plans to carry out an extensive road improvement program. Such a program would include hard surfacing of many miles of Alberta roads as well as other improvements.

An indication of what Alberta is intending to expend this year was given recently by the Department of Public Works when it asked the Dominion Government to match a $1,000,000 outlay dollar for dollar which would mean a $2,000,000 expenditure on roads this year.

In the legislature within the next few weeks will discuss what the province estimates to be brought down as prepared to spend itself. While there has been a dominion appropriation each year for some time, it is not known yet what the federal government will spend in this province during 1938.

Provincial authorities hope to have the first course of hard surfacing completed from the International boundary to Edmonton by the end of the 1938 construction season, with the possible exception of some 70 miles south of Red Deer, which if not done this year, would be one of the first projects for 1939.

Officials of the Alberta Motor Association are urging the importance of hard surfacing of main highways, pointing out that this is the only way the province will secure the full benefit of the cash trade created by motor touring traffic.
